

The day colour disappeared A sea life story

Monday Turtle swam ever so slowly. On their back, rode Friday Crab, Thursday Lobster and Tuesday Seahorse. Beside them Sunday Turtle, circling under and over the bigger turtle.

Below, February Fishes - a shoal of fishes - darts back and forth, spiralling as September Sea Duck, chases after them. [Sea Duck is a shaman]

"It's a dance" says Tuesday Sea Horse. "Sea Ducks don't eat fishes. See how February Fishes leads, and the September Sea Duck follows?"

A bottle with a message is ahead of Monday Turtle who begins to read the text of the message. Suddenly, the colour of the sea world starts to fade - to black, white and shades of grey. As if, all is turned to stone. What was happening?

ROAR! WHOOOSH! Like a rocket, September Sea Duck passes the sea creatures. The duck's wake tears into the water around, upsetting everyone.

"Where's Friday Crab?!" said Thursday Lobster.

"September Sea Duck's taken Friday Crab!!!"

The Sea Duck flies to the surface, and through it. Into the air above the sea with Friday Crab.
